

THE AGRICULTURE UNION AND THE PSAC: AN UNBEATABLE TEAM

Agriculture Union members are also automatically members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada. One of Canada's largest unions, the PSAC is an umbrella union for 17 'Component' Unions like the Agriculture Union, which are largely organized along Departmental lines.

Simply speaking, the Agriculture Union is the 'expert' when it comes to dealing with our members' workplace issues. We know the 'culture' and the 'players' within the various Departments and Agencies that employ our members.

Agriculture Union Local Officers, the National Council, the National Executive and National Office staff provide direct workplace assistance on such matters as grievances, health and safety, union-management consultation and local administration.

The PSAC, on the other hand, is the 'expert' when it comes to dealing with our ultimate employer – the Government of Canada. The PSAC is recognized by the government as the bargaining agent for Agriculture Union members. It stickhandles such demanding, expensive and time-consuming issues as job security, pensions and pay equity.

The PSAC provides the Agriculture Union with both strength-in-numbers and resources we could never hope to develop as a stand-alone union. Of course, as members of both unions, many Agriculture Union members are active participants in PSAC-led activities – from special conferences to bargaining teams, from political action to organizing.

The Agriculture Union and the PSAC are an unbeatable team. Each has a critical and necessary role to play. Together, they are stronger than the sum of their individual strengths.

As members of the Agriculture Union and the PSAC, we truly have the best of both worlds. The Agriculture Union provides the specific knowledge and familiarity needed to deal with the particular government Departments and Agencies that employ our members. The PSAC has the resources and expertise to take on the larger federal public service issues that impact all Agriculture Union members, regardless of their specific job or workplace.
